China's Covered Bridges

Speaker: Dr. Terry E. Miller, Kent State University

Program: Unknown even among Chinese scholars until the 1990s, China's covered bridges (called lang qiao [corridor bridges]) are concentrated deep in the mountains of the eastern provinces, carrying a network of footpaths across rivers great and small, in towns and in the wilderness. Built by local farmers over the past 600 years, many bridges use the "woven arch" design, where an intricate formation of timbers below the deck support the bridge. In contrast, the Dong minority further west around Guilin build remarkable cantilever bridges that include spectacular towers. This presentation is based on Dr. Miller's extensive visits to these bridges in 2005 and 2007 in Fuzhou, Zhejiang, and Guangxi provinces.

Location: Hilton Garden Inn, 1100 Carnegie Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio
